Abbotsford from the River Tweed.

Within the pile dwelt those of ancient scutcheon,
Filled with bright dreams, and high imaginations rich,
And bound these knowledge, wonder chained the whole
Of human mind, but turned its glorious eye
Of love on Caledon's bleak hills and cloudy sky.

Dear John.

Shall be home from Edinburgh about 4 o'clock tomorrow afternoon. If I can get a cab to the station I will not walk. Tonight I am sleeping at Waverley Hotel. Will write from Leeds.

Abbotsford from the River Tweed.

Within that pile he dwelt whose ardent soul,
Filled with bright dreams, and aspirations high,
And boundless knowledge, wonder-chained the whole
Of human kind, but turned its glorious eye
Of love on Caledon's bleak hills and cloudy sky.
